

The Northern Territory Government is improving housing in remote communities by investing $1.1 billion over 10 years. The Remote Housing Program includes:

$500 million over 10 years for the construction of new public housing.

$200 million over 10 years for repairs and maintenance.

$200 million over 10 years to increase living space in existing homes.

$200 million over 10 years to expand Government Employee Housing to include locally recruited NT Government employees in remote areas.

The program extends to remote communities throughout the Territory.

Focus on Aboriginal Business Enterprises being ready for work over the life of the program.

The program will create jobs and training for locals in the community wherever possible.

All communities will be consulted about where and when work will happen throughout the program.

Local decision-making with each community having input into their future and their homes.
